1. On 23 February 1953, the barracks camp on Trabrennbahn, Berlin-Karlshorst, was occupied by about 3,000 soldiers wearing black-bordered crimson epaulets. Source noticed that, beginning on 19 February, the occupation continually increased. Six buses, [ ] were parked in the camp during this period. From 15 to 23 February, up to 280 soldiers received infantry training in the installation and at the adjoining training area on various days. About 60 soldiers were repeatedly seen moving out for firing practices on trucks [ ] 25X1C
